

This Wimbledon, put a SMILE on Murray's face with your FREE!

VIZ

Cheer-Up-You-Miserable-Fucker-o-Matic™

Tennis Ace Enjolification Device

BEFORE

AFTER

WIMBLEDON fortnight is upon us once more, and now we have finally given up Tim Henman as a bad job, the country's hopes of success are pinned on Andy Murray. British tennis fans back him through every round, cheering his aces, applauding his approach shots and screaming 'Come on, Andy' just before his opponent serves on match point. He is possibly the best-supported player in the championship.

But never once has the sulky Scot repaid his fans with so much as a smile. Never has even the faintest flicker of a grin passed his lips.

Well, this year, you have the chance to change that, thanks to the Viz Cheer-Up-You-Miserable-Fucker-o-Matic.

For the first time see Andy:

- SMILE to the crowd after losing a lengthy tiebreak to an unseeded opponent.
- GRIN as he smashes his racquet into the ground after serving a double fault.
- BEAM as he retires from the game after his back gives out in the fourth round.

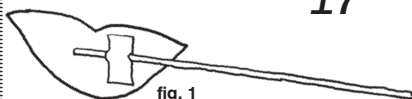

fig. 1

Simply cut out the smile that corresponds with the size of your TV screen, and attach it to a kebab skewer or a straightened-out coat hanger using sellotape (fig 1). Then crouch down by the TV and position it in front of his mardy, multi-millionaire mug whenever it comes on your screen. And Hey Presto! Watch Andy smile his way through Wimbledon.